CHOOSING A PROFESSION. In this country every one chooses his own profession. Employments are not hereditary like the castes in India; nor are they so generally selected by the parents as in Europe. Each man, each youth, chooses for himself. Men even choose two or three times over. In England and in Germany, a lad, at fourteen, is bound apprentice seven years to something dria. from which he seldom deviates. Here, it is A LOT OF GROUND, on the North side of seldom that a man does not change his occu- King street, which is thus described in a deed pation half a dezen times in the course of his from Charles McKnight to William E. Atwell, life. Strange to say, instead of being ruiced, dated 16th of April, 1852: Beginning at the such is the demand for labor, that he may lay West corner of William McKnight's lot; thence such is the demand for labor, that he may lay by something in all if he will.

But all the time that is spent in learning two or three professions, instead of one, is so much of his time lost forever .-And so much as is not spent in acquiring a thorough knowledge of it is worse than wasted, creating every day a loss and an injury to all around, positively incalculable. In Eu- three equal instalments, at six, twelve, and rope, and in the East, a man knows his own eighteen months, from the day of sale, with inbusiness and nothing else. With us it often | terest from said period-the said deterred paybappens that he knows everything else but ments to be secured by the bonds of the pur-for which he has no capacity, or taste, or in- fully paid, and the property liable to be resold clination, and to educate him for it, and noth- upon the failure of the purchaser to comply ing else, must be highly pernicious, while with the terms of sale. vet too much facility of choice in very early life is almost as bad as none. Let any one think of his own youth, and the superficial and mistaken views of all professions be first formed, and, he will be surprised almost that any one should have thought of letting his judgment decide the matter. If there is a matter in which parental wisdem should guide without foreing and be guided by the character, but not by the whims of childhood, it is just this.

We knew of a lad, once, who met Lord Brougham, or some other great lawyer, riding out in his carriage, in Hyde Park, attended by two or three footmen in splendid liveries, when his father, thinking it a fine time to instill into the mind of the youth a taste for forensic eloquence and its distinctions, asked his own son how he would like to be a lawyer. The lad innocently replied that he believed he would rather follow the occupation of those gentlemen in the splendid clothes of green and gold, than that of the little pugnosed old man, in a plain suit of black, that was along with them. Nor was it until it at six, twelve and eighteen months, from the was explained that, on arriving at home those footmen had to lay aside the fine clothes and interest and to be secured by the bonds of the black the shoes or wait at the table, instead purchaser, and the title to be retained until full of eating with the company, that he could be | payment is made. convinced.

A mere boyish desire for the fine liveries of any occupation, whether it be the regimentals and music of the soldier, the elevated rostrum and plaudits of the fourth of July orator, or the pulpit of the divine, is just no proof of adaptiveness for any one of the pursuits. It is boyish courage, energy and selfconquest that should mark out the successful and State of Virginia, pronounced at the Nosoldier; strength and grasp of intellect, and a vember term, 1855, in the suit of Tatsapaugh commanding power of persussive expression, that should indicate the coming pleader; and a fervid piety, in conjunction with all of these, that should point out the future divine. The love of the drum and of the enaulet, or of the gown and of the caseck, has led many a coward into the army, and many a goose and idler into the pulpit.

Character is the essence of destiny, and the discovery of its traits is a great fou tion of the successful choice of an occupation. | months from the day of sale-the deferred pay-But this is by no means all. A youth should ments to be secured by the bonds of the purchabave a certain respect for his future profes- | ser, with good personal security, until the pursion, even more than a love for it; success in | chase money is fully paid. it should be the height of his ambition, and failure a thing to be avoided at any cost of trial and energy. Find out what occupation your son would consider it the highest attainment to do well in, and you have no small indication of his best calling. If his taste and judgment are radically wrong about this, the fault is most probably in those who ought to have formed it better-if at all as far as possible.

But a parent's position in life, or the ear ly and necessary occupations of childhood, in which a lad shall at least begin life. That which he can do best, and most naturally and profitably, is generally the best for him. Any occupation that now most fully occupies all his powers and developes his energies voluntarily to the utmost, is educating him most effectually for any and every other occupation in life.

But so far as choice is still left, each select, not selfishly, that occupation in which be can make the most money or fame, but that in which he can do the world the most good. This elevated and noble feeling of disinterestedness will awaken the noblest feelings and lead to the most exalted succees. This makes the patriot soldier, the elequent orator, and the true divine .-- Philadel-than any other company chartered in the State by insuring with or without a premium note .-If the applicant prefer, he can pay the full amount of the premium in cash, or by effecting a cash insurance for two years, the insured saves oneeighth of the amount he would otherwise have to pay: or by becoming a member, and giving a small premium note, the insured saves nearly do. would do well, before purchasing elsewhere, to one half of the amount charged by Stock Companies, when insuring from year to year. This is the advantage resulting from the combination of THE CASH AND MUTUAL PRINCIPLE.

This company commenced issuing Policies against loss or damage by fire, on the 16th of March, 1854, since which time over five thousand seven hundred persons have insured and become members of the Company, and over thirty thousand dollars have been paid for losses .-Having trebled our business during the past year, we feel grateful for the liberal patronage bestowed upon the Company thus far, and for its flattering prospects of future usefulness. The Directors hope and believe that by prudence, caution and a rigid system of economy, they will establish for this Company a reputation for cheapness and safety, not surpassed by any
